

PLANS OF ENRIGHT BACKED BY HYLAN IN TALK TO CHIEFS

Mayor Advocates Closer Co-operation Between Police Departments Throughout U. S.

URGES CENTRAL BUREAU

Says Unemployment Is Another Big Problem—Three Days' Conference Begins.

Mayor Hyland to-day addressed the first session of the National Police Conference, which opened in the Hotel Commodore. The session was opened by Commissioner Enright. The Rev. Francis P. Duffy delivered the invocation, consisting of a prayer for public officials composed by Archbishop Carroll of Maryland. Mayor Hyland was then introduced by former Police Commissioner Douglas I. McKay, Temporary Chairman, who described him to the delegates as "the greatest city official in America."

The Mayor, in welcoming the delegates, promised hospitality and drew attention to the many advantages of New York for their entertainment. He outlined the programme he wants to see carried out along the lines of Commissioner Enright's ideas. This includes standardized police procedure throughout the United States, closer co-operation between Police Departments, establishment of a central Police Bureau, perhaps in Washington; standardized method of handling criminal immigration from Canada, Mexico and through seaports; co-operative method of tracing criminals, Anarchists and radicals, and interchange of information regarding movement of criminals leaving prisons.

"Criminals released from prison in other cities can and do come to New York and soon are swallowed up in the city's teeming millions, particularly if they are not known to the police of this city," the Mayor said. Very often the first information we get of their presence here is their commission of crime, subsequent arrest and discovery of their criminal record.

"Another problem that looms on the police horizon is that of unemployment. To-day in this city alone the number of unemployed approximate half a million. The number of unemployed in all the States of the union is steadily moving from the three million to the five million mark. Business depression is apparent in many quarters, with possibilities of further spread. Actual and potential criminals will always be found among the ranks of the unemployed."

Mayor Hyland invited all the delegates to visit him at 11:45 o'clock Thursday morning at the Hotel Commodore. "Come and see me and make my acquaintance," he said. "Find out that I'm a pretty good fellow and that I'm not as bad as the newspapers make me out to be."

He said he would continue trying to organize a leisure club in New York to show the world that this city is free of gambling and vice and is clean.

Commissioner Enright urged the delegates to take up his plans for a central bureau for the dissemination of "criminal intelligence."

"Co-operation is needed now between the cities in following criminals and radicals," he declared. "We had had such a bureau when the Wall Street explosion occurred we would have had it solved because we would have had tab on every radical and compelled him to explain his whereabouts when the explosion took place."

He declared New York has the greatest finger print bureau in the world, for which he gave credit to Deputy Commissioner Fawcett, and then taking up the problems of the police in apprehending criminals he said the Prison Reform Society is a hindrance to the Police Department.

"The Society takes hold of prisoners and actively protects them, instead of protecting society," he declared. "Prison authorities should notify the police when a prisoner is released so they can follow him and keep tab on his activities."

The visiting policemen attended a luncheon given in their honor by the Merchants' Association of New York at which President William F. Morgan presided. Commissioner Enright spoke again on the subjects he discussed at the morning session and was applauded, but the visitors gave a greater hand to Miss Beatrice Leeds, one of the entertainers, who did a bare-legged dance.

ANOTHER NAME ADDED TO HONOR ROLL OF POLICE

Patrolman John A. Conk, Injured Saving Children, Dies in Brooklyn Hospital.

Another name was added to the honor roll of the Police Department, men who have given their lives in the line of duty, when Policeman John A. Conk died in Wyckoff Heights Hospital from injuries incurred last Thursday in stopping a runaway horse which menaced the lives of children at a "school crossing" where he was on duty.

It was toward the close of the lunch hour and children were flocking across the street at Knickerbocker Avenue and Grove Street, Brooklyn, when the horse, drawing a peddler's wagon owned by Henry Schaff, No. 17 Morgan Street, was frightened by a passing automobile and ran away.

Conk, shouting a warning to the children, ran forward, leaped on the wagon and made his way out onto the shafts, finally getting astride the horse. The policeman managed to swerve the horse away from a group of children who were too panic-stricken to save themselves.

Before Conk could bring the horse to a stop the wagon struck a pile of gravel left by the Street Department for repairs at the Myrtle Avenue crossing on Knickerbocker Avenue, and the lurch threw Conk to the ground. The wheels of the wagon passed over his head. He was unconscious when Policeman Joseph Bauman, a short distance further on, brought the horse to a stop after being dragged 100 feet, and then went back to Conk's assistance.

Conk was taken to the hospital, where an operation was performed in a vain attempt to save his life. Policeman Conk was forty-five years old and had been on the police force fifteen years. He was attached to Wilson Avenue station and lived at No. 1135 East 92d Street.

A year ago, at the same corner, Conk stopped a runaway and was awarded a bronze star. Five years ago he saved two lives at a fire in Evergreen Avenue, Brooklyn, and was given a silver star and a commendation. He is survived by his widow and two sons, Elyse, twenty-three, and Harry James, eleven years old.

SAYS WHITE WINGS LAY DOWN ON JOB

Threatened City's Milk and Coal Supply in Not Removing Snow, Declares Leo.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Leo explained today that he refused to institute in his department workers alleged to have failed to report for snow shovelling on Feb. 20.

"By laying down," the Commissioner said, "the men threatened the city's milk and coal supply and crippled transportation and business. What we need is honest service and not excuses. They were dismissed after hearings. Nine hundred laid down deliberately. Many excuses were offered, but the only excuse that was considered was sickness and these cases are being investigated."

If there were men among them who were nearing twenty years' service and had been on the list for a long time, which retires them at half pay, they were the more experienced and therefore the more valuable. I have inquired of the Civil Service Commission and find that there are 1,000 vacancies in the list. I shall fill all vacancies from this list. If any men who are working would rather work for the union, all right."

400 PICTURE BRIDES HERE FROM GREECE

One Drops Bottle of Cognac to Her Fiance, but It Was Lost in the Deep.

The King Alexander of the Greek Line docked at South Brooklyn this morning with 3,141 passengers from Athens. Forty of them were sent to Hoffman Island for sanitation purposes.

Among the others were 400 "picture brides"—girls who have come to America to marry men who know them only by their photographs. One of these brides was an Armenian, Marie Zaganlian. Her fiance, who had recognized her after a voyage around the ship in a "bumboat," sent her some carnations when she let down a cord to him. She returned the compliment by tossing him a bottle of cognac, but it bounced off his head and plunged into the deep. He was too dizzy to dive for it.

PRISONER ESCAPES, GUARD GONE TOO

Was Left in Detention Pen While Policeman Went Into Court Room.

Domitius Gilbert, twenty-two, of No. 34 Catharine Street, who has a Sing Sing record for burglary, was under arrest for a brief period this morning, then he escaped from the detention room of the Centre Street Court.

He was arrested by Detective Howard C. O'Leary of the Oak Street Station, who charged him with grand larceny, alleging that he had about $50 worth of stolen clothes in his possession.

O'Leary had another prisoner, a Chinaman, when he started into the Court room. He says he left Gilbert in the detention room in charge of a policeman in plain clothes, whose name he did not know. When he returned fifteen minutes later Gilbert and his guard had both disappeared. So O'Leary went out to search for his prisoner.

He said the plain clothes policeman was wearing a shield, but he failed to get the number.

SCOTCH "INFLATED" 14 TUBES ON SHIP

Customs Men Also Find Liquor Frozen in Ice and in Coal on the Glendola.

The steamship Glendola of the Atlantic Fruit Company was tied up at Pier 4, Army Base, Brooklyn, this morning when three astute customs inspectors—George Barron, John McAdams and J. E. Scully—went aboard to look for undeclared booze.

The first thing that aroused their curiosity was a group of fourteen iron tubes for automobile tires, all inflated with Scotch whiskey. Near the bottom of the tubes were found 229 bottles frozen inside of cakes of ice with a lot of crushed ice on top to make the bottles invisible.

Then the searchers found a few tons of coal—which struck them as queer because the ship is an oil burner. They moved the coal and found 290 bottles under it.

All this booze was seized, but the inspectors could not find anybody who would claim ownership of it. The ship came in yesterday from Central American ports.

19 MASON SUPPLY MEN PLEAD GUILTY TO CONSPIRACY

Will Be Sentenced Monday by Justice McAvoy—34 Others to Go on Trial.

Pleas of guilty were entered to-day by nineteen members of the Association of Dealers in Masons' Supplies when fifty-three members were called for trial on indictments charging conspiracy, before Justice Vernon M. Davis, in criminal branch, Supreme Court. Those who pleaded guilty were:

John A. McCarthy, No. 243 West 70th Street, business associate and personal friend of Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader; Wright D. Goss, No. 46 West 73d Street, formerly a member of Mayor Hyland's Committee on Housing; John A. Philbrick, No. 375 Park Avenue; Joseph Philbrick, Sound Beach, Conn.; Alden J. Harcourt, No. 608 West 47th Street; Walter W. Krider, Kew Gardens, L. I.; Frank E. Wise, No. 236 West 101st Street; P. J. Hoaney, No. 654 King Avenue, City Island.

Francis W. Howland, No. 25 West 95th Street; Daniel Darrow, Spuyten Duyvil; John P. Kane, Hewletta, L. I.; William E. Beattie, No. 262 Jefferson Avenue, Brooklyn; William H. Schmolli Jr., New Brighton, S. I.; Graham Murtha, No. 27 East 83d Street; James Noonan, No. 135 East 148th Street; Theodore C. Wood, No. 302 West 102d Street; Robert W. Main, No. 567 Eighth Street, Brooklyn; Henry J. Jova, Newburgh, N. Y.; and John M. Kilcullen, No. 817 East 55th Street.

Justice Davis said he would pass sentences next Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The trial of the other defendants was fixed for May 13.

In addition to the nineteen individuals who pleaded guilty, thirteen corporations of the twenty-nine under indictment, most of them the concerns with which indicted individuals were connected, also entered pleas of guilty. The corporations were:

Bell & Kilcullen, Inc., No. 1418 West Farms Road; Builders' Brick & Supply Co., Inc., West Farms Road and 172d Street; Candler, Smith & Howell, foot East 26th Street; Murtha & Schmolli Co., foot East 109th Street; Noonan Building Material Co., Inc., 653d Street and Harlem River; Rufus Darrow's Son, Inc., 49th Street and North River; Empire Brick and Supply Co., No. 103 Park Avenue; John P. Kane Co., No. 102 Park Avenue.

John A. Philbrick & Bro., 97th Street and East River; William A. Thomas Company, East River and Third Street; Frank E. Wise & Son, foot East 26th Street; Murtha & Schmolli Co., foot East 109th Street; Standard Building Supply Company, No. 608 West 147th Street.

The pleas of guilty were offered immediately after Special Deputy Attorney General William A. DeFord had read the indictment against Edward A. McCall, who became counsel for the nineteen individuals in place of Martin Conboy, who announced at the last court proceedings that he had withdrawn from the case.

Because of the wealth and political power of some of the men involved, the masons' supply group has attracted unusual public interest. The efforts of the men and their friends to escape without prison sentences have spared no pains.

In the recent trial of master plumbers in the John T. Hettrick "code of practice" group, pleas of guilty won leniency from the court, but in the case of wealth and powerful members whose participation in the scheme was brought out, Justice McAvoy sentenced them to prison.

TUNNEL PROBLEM GOES TO NEWTON

New York and Jersey Commissions Refer Expenditure Question to Attorney General.

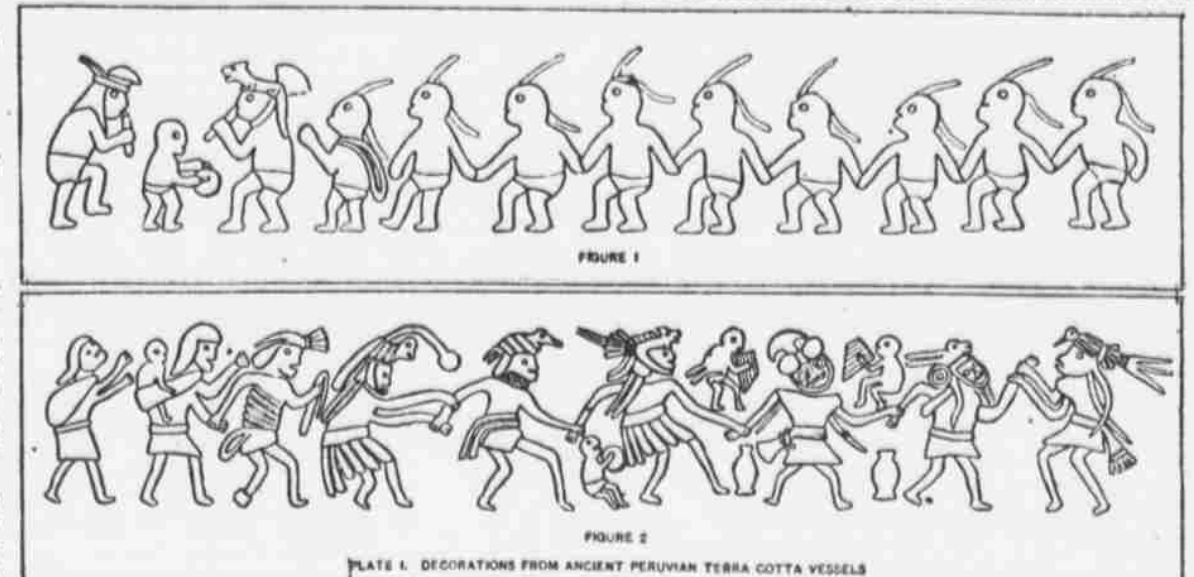

Decision to refer to the Attorney General of New York the question whether the New York members of the New York and New Jersey Tunnel Commissions are empowered under their charter to authorize expenditures for improving approaches to the Jersey City terminus of the proposed vehicular tunnel was reached at a meeting of the Commission in Jersey City to-day.

The question will be taken up at a conference to be arranged with the Attorney General by Paul Windels, counsel for the New York Commission, and attended by Mr. Windels, Deputy Attorney General Emory Richards of New Jersey, and Corporation Counsel John Milton of Jersey City.

Agreement to place the matter before the New York Attorney General was reached after discussion in which the New York Commission contended that, aside from questions of expediency and equity, the charter under which they acted did not empower them to make expenditures for approaches to the tunnel except for the plazas expressly authorized.

Prehistoric Peru's Pictorial Proof That Jazz Originated In Land of Incas

San Francisco's Notorious Barbary Coast Loses One of Its Claims to Fame, Shorn by the Archaeologists of the American Museum of Natural History, Who Produce Weird but Convincing Designs Executed on Pottery Made Centuries and Centuries Ago.

And now comes the startling news that the palm has been accorded to prehistoric Peru for the initial production of jazz by the jazz band.

The original jazzers have all along been supposed to have discovered themselves on the Barbary Coast, out towards the North Beach of San Francisco, where since the days of '99 sailors and pirates and other adventurers have shivered their timbers and mingled with shore maidens in the terpsichorean mazes.

But prehistoric Peru has the papers to Missouri-ize its claim, and the trouble has been all stirred up by Charles W. Mead, Assistant Curator of the Department of Anthropology in the American Museum of Natural History. On the ancient pottery and metal objects of art are found decorations representing the devious styles of the dance—the jazz, the shimmy, the one-step and all the tobs.

There isn't any doubt of it, and also there are designs of the jazz instruments they used in the orchestra of those days of the dances far niente and sleepless nights. The instruments picked up from the graves and ruins of ancient Peru by archaeologists include drums and cymbals, rattles, pipes, flutes, whistles, trumpets and the unmistakable ancestor of the oboe.

Even in those days the ladies wore anklets and wristlets. Bells and rattles they wore, and there was music wherever the wearer went. The ukulele of those fine old days and jazz nights was the "huayra puhura," and if that doesn't sound just like jazz "hooray" we'll leave it to Gatti-Casazza.

The huayra puhura were pipes, but this is no pipe. Musical pipes are still popular with the Peruvian Indians. The flute was a pipe in the old days, made of cane or bone and of gourd carved in fantastic shape. Some of them had holes in the lower side, evidently for the use of the thumb. The drums of prehistoric times were made of the skins stretched over the edges of a gourd, or a barrel-top shape, for the archaeological shapers have not yet discovered that the Peruvians carried their ditties in a bottle or barrel.

The famous double whistling jar, prove that the tumbler was popular even in those days. If you remember the tumbler, you know it was composed of a lot of tumblers filled or half filled or quarter filled with water, the music being produced by running a baton or a stick palm of the hand over the edges of the glasses. The whistling jars consisted of two pottery vessels connected near the bottom by a tube, allowing the passage of water freely from one to the other.

Near the top of one jar was a whistle, and if you shook both jars, the water, passing from the lower one, would force air through the vent and the musical notes would be the result. The Huancayo, a very large jar, made of the drumsheads out of the skins of their enemies, and this music was more terrible than the jazz of to-day. The bells for the Peruvian jazz orchestra were made of copper, with pebbles for clappers, and the rattles were collected from shells, which were plentiful at the seashore or on the mountain top.

But that the jazz and the shimmy were popular in the prehistoric days of Peru the pictures on the pottery have already proved. In the days of the Incas, the Peruvians were into terpsichorean revels and records in no doubt. They had all the movements except the early closing one, and it is known to-day. The police of prehistoric days, like the police of to-day, were always one step behind.

70 INDICTED WITH GREGORY FIRM AS STOCK DEFRAUDERS

Misuse of Mails Charged in Sale of Securities of American Tire Corporation.

Seventy stock brokers and their agents are listed for pleading to-morrow in the Federal District Court before Judge Learned Hand in connection with an alleged stock fraud that resulted in the indictment late yesterday of Durell, Gregory & Co., Inc., No. 72 Wall Street, and members and agents of the corporation.

The stock of this corporation, which was organized under New York State laws more than a year ago, is owned by three brothers—Harvey N. Rhode H. and John M. Gregory. They had seventy representatives in different parts of the East. The stock which they were selling was that of the American Tire Corporation of Delaware, which is listed as a $5,000,000 concern with $5,500,000 common stock at $10 par and $500,000 preferred stock at $100 par.

Harvey N. Gregory is in Ludlow Street Jail where he was committed Saturday evening by Federal Judge A. N. Hand for contempt of court in that he refused to produce certain books and lists of the corporation that were subpoenaed by the Federal Grand Jury. His brothers are not in jail. Their efforts to obtain Harvey N. Gregory's release on bail have failed.

The indictment was returned on evidence submitted by Assistant United States Attorney Peter B. Olney and obtained by Post Office Inspectors Honvery and Dorn and charges use of the mails to defraud. It alleges that Durell, Gregory & Co., Inc., sought an option on the common stock of the American Tire Corporation, paying an average of $2.98 per share and selling at $10 and more per share. They flooded the mails with literature, it is charged, which placed the production of the tire factory as 1,000 tires, 1,000 tubes and 10,000 feet of hose a day.

Large dividends were soon to be paid, the literature is alleged to have read, business was rapidly increasing, and the stock was soon to be listed on the Exchange, thus increasing its value. Agents, the indictment charges, were paid largely out of the money they collected from prospective buyers, who in most cases paid $10 a share for the stock.

Defendants named in the indictment follow: Durell Gregory & Co., Inc., No. 72 Wall Street, Rhode H. Gregory, John M. Gregory, Harvey N. Gregory, Maurice Hotchner, Nate Schwartz, Isidore H. Kohn, Albert D. W. Blum, Connelius D. Boardan, Joseph Vincent Bailey, Arthur Lehman (also known as Arthur Lehmann), Paul H. Manton, Henry Friedreich, also known as Harry Friedrichs.

Sidney Smith, George Lapidus, Peter Saul, Martin Lederer, William Seaman, John O'Brien, Theodore Collins, Jerome Collins, A. Frank Weinberg, Thomas Lamedin, also known as Thomas Lameday, Benjamin Marion, Henry Dais, Barney Karmine, Charles Carlson, Harry Zimmerman.

Kenneth Kirgin, George Mayer, Harry Goldstone, Ralph Lombardy, Samuel M. Kinsler, Henry Niditch (also known as Henry Niditch), Philip Barnes, Edmond McBrien, C. E. Moore and S. M. Minter. (The last two are alleged to have represented the company with branch offices in Syracuse.)

The first names of the following defendants are unknown to the Grand Jury and are described in the indictment as "John," as follows: John Alderman, John Benjamin, John Chase, John Cohen, John Daugherty, John Fields, John Meyer, John Shorrock, all of New Haven; John Barney of Syracuse, John Foster, John Maxwell and John Mory of Buffalo; John Greenberg of Providence, John Glick, John Hoffman, John Kronenberg, John Leyden, John Rogers and John Worrell, of New York City.
